NEWSLETTER OF THE SWISS-AMERICAN SOCIETY OF PITTSBURGH, PA

VOL 4, NO. 1

SPRING 1995

Forthcoming Events

Enclosed with this newsletter you find the invitation for the traditional Spring Luncheon. While we have not had a very hard winter this year we all are looking forward to sunshine, warmth, flowers, green, and soft breezes. The Spring Luncheon will help to enjoy them and to renew some old acquaintances.

Holiday Dinner and 1995 Officers

A good crowd was in attendance at the 1994 Holiday Dinner. An unavoidable business trip to Europe for President Rolf Kuehni made it impossible for him to attend the final official event of his tenure. Joseph Gigandet ably filled in for him in welcoming the guests and chairing the brief business meeting.

A nominating committee chaired by Chuck Erb did a yeoman's job in coming up with a slate of officers. The membership supported their efforts by electing all proposed candidates.

The 1995 slate of officers of the Society are as follows:

Joseph Gigandet, President

Bruce Kuenzi, Vice President

Sandra Tengowski, Secretary

Florence Jacob, Treasurer

Trudy Kuenzi, Membership Secretary

Directors elected for 1 year:

Ernest Gubser

Ronald J. Saffron

Directors elected for 2 years:

Charles Claudon, Jr

Evelyn Ruffing

Auditors:

George Cline and Barbara Kuenzi

We wish all of them much success in their efforts to provide the members with an interesting and stimulating program.

New Identity Cards for Swiss Abroad

Starting in 1995 Swiss Abroad will be able to obtain new identity cards from their local responsible consular agency (New York in the case of Pittsburgh). The current identity cards are being replaced because they are easy to forge. The new model, in credit card format, is being introduced during 1995. The information given on the cards are in Switzerland's four languages, as well as in English. A three-stage system of security elements in the card will make forgery impossible. All personal details on the card will be centrally stored at the Federal Office of Police in Switzerland. Data protection is guaranteed. The price of the card has not yet been decided but it will cost less than a passport. If you are interested contact the Consulate General in New York or consult the local Consul Heinz Kunz.

A Source Tax on Pension Benefits

A law has become effective in Switzerland on January 1, 1995 according to which Swiss federal, cantonal, or municipal pension benefits for recipients residing abroad have 1% of the gross pension income deducted. This amount is collected by the Swiss Federal Government. Cantonal governments soon will also introduce taxation at the source (withholding), by deducting an additional amount (varying by Canton). There are only two things in life certain .....

Swiss Voters Reject Agricultural Reform, but agree on 'spending brake'

Despite the fact that Switzerland has chronic overproduction of milk, cheese, and other agricultural products, that then are highly subsidized to sell them outside the country, Swiss voters recently rejected an agricultural reform package. Many groups did not think that the proposals went far enough. Environmental groups have called for greater support of organic farming conservatives and consumer circles wanted freer market conditions.

In the same vote a constitutional amendment introducing a 'spending brake' was overwhelmingly accepted. In practice it means that spending plans beyond a certain limit will in the future have to be approved by a majority of all members of parliament, rather than only by a majority of all the members present on a given day. Over eighty percent of the voters approved this mild form of further spending control.

Canton Jura Close to Achieving its Goals

The interesting exercise in democracy begun a few years ago with the secession of the Canton Jura from Canton Bern continues. Recently, the Bernese voters overwhelmingly decided to modify their cantonal borders once again and transfer the small village of Vellerat (70 inhabitants) to the Canton Jura. The Vellerats have been interested in this move since 15 years.

The last claim of Jura against Bern for all remaining French-speaking districts in the Bernese Canton will have to be settled later. While on the surface this might be another sensible move, there is another and also old reason that might not lead to its success in a future vote. The current borders were established in the 16th century, when the southern French-speaking districts of Switzerland changed, together with the neighbouring German-speaking Bern, from the catholic to the reformed church.

Swiss Woman Skier Again Clinches Slalom and Overall Skiing Title

Vreni Schneider, triple Olympic champion, won her sixth World Slalom title by placing second in the recent slalom races in Lenzerheide and winning the final race in Bormio, Italy. She is also first in the overall standings for women. The Swiss men skiers had a more difficult time in this season, with all categories continuing to be dominated by Alberto Tomba from Italy. In the women's downhill category the winning skier in this season is the American Picabo Street, also of Olympic fame.

Swiss Franc Continues to Get Stronger

Travelling in Switzerland continues to get more expensive due to the rising value of the Swiss franc compared to the U.S. dollar. Recently, the official exchange rate was at sFr. 1.17/dollar. However, if you are actually buying Swiss banknotes you only get about sFr. 1.12/dollar. Keep saving for this trip you are planning! A consequence of the strong Swiss franc has been a 10% reduction in overnight stays in Swiss hotels in 1994 compared to 1993. Other negative effects involve the export of Swiss goods.

Swatch Tells When to Take the Pills

The Swiss watch maker Swatch is teaming up with the Swiss telephone company to develop a special watch that can beep its owner at a given time of the day to remind her that it is time to take the pills. The watch dial then displays specific information about what to take.

Swiss Humor

A professor in Switzerland warned her class to beware of polls and pollsters. "They can get any answer they want with loaded questions," she warned. She cited the case of Swiss voters who replied 'no' when asked if they approved of smoking while praying. "The vote turned to 'yes' when the same people were asked if they approved of praying while smoking," she told the class.
